

Clovis Went Dry

Clovis is the largest dry town in the state of New Mexico. The imperial edict of the city council making it dry, became effective Friday night of last week. The closing was peaceful and without unusual scenes, except that those who would look for the last time "upon the wine when it was red" were out to watch the "wet town out and the dry town in." In fact the number that had wet noses were in excess of the usual limit, but there was no violence of any kind to mark the closing hours. Hereafter the song "How Dry I Am" could be sung without any conception as to its true meaning. Now it is different. Before it was classed as a "keg party" ballad, now its sentimental song, sung only on rare occasions.

Yes, Clovis is dry, the weather is dry, everything is dry.

It is stated that the board of education is considering the advisability of asking for a $45,000 bond issue in addition to the $35,000 00 issue to be voted upon at the coming city election on April 4 for the purpose of erecting a modern high school building. Upon investigation the News learns that the present arrangements will serve the purpose for at least two years more at the present rate of scholarship increase and we do not, therefore, deem it advisable to burden the tax payers with another issue at this time. It has only been a short time since an issue of $12,000 was voted for a west side ward school building and while we thought the amount insufficient at the time, we would not favor another issue at this time. If the town should continue to grow and conditions are as prosperous in the next two years as they have been in the past, we will then be in a position to vote another bond issue for school purposes, not of $45,000, but of not less than $50,000. When we build again, we want something substantial enough to answer for all purposes for many years to come. We believe that some time soon, Clovis will want a big modern two story high school building, but to saddle another burden of taxation upon the people at this election and under the present circumstances would not be expedient.

Quay county returned the soil Tuesday that it borrowed from Curry county a week ago last Monday.

The formal opening of the new J. K. Walker market was held Wednesday and the market profusely decorated with colored lights and carnations. The word Welcome was lettered in pink carnations and refreshments of coffee and cakes was served through the afternoon and evening. Mesdames Leland Chapman, Worrell and Walker assisted in serving the refreshments. Dressed poultry, vegetables, fruits and choice cuts were enclosed in solid cakes of ice which were on display in the big show windows. Walker believes in advertising and his increasing business indicates that it pays.

There is an investment-satisfaction in owning a Dort—a feeling that you have made an investment rather than a purchase.

As you drive your Dort this feeling will be more strongly borne home to you that you have received real value for your money.

When you consider that the 1916 Dort Model Five Touring Car fully equipped with electric lighting and starting and demountable rims sells for only $650.00 and that its equipment is complete, not a single accessory to buy, you begin to get an idea of the great value the Dort offers.

Buyers should see the Dort at our show rooms and let us explain this value point by point.
